In the modern world, humanity has made incredible progress in the study and improvement of various forms of communication and their implementation. However, until now, in the world where people actually taught to communicate even machines and computers, there are still problems with learning and using foreign languages in everyday life. And very often this is due to elementary human laziness, reluctance, and also a lack of understanding why it is necessary to learn a foreign language and how it can be used in our life.

Whatever problem you have to solve, the most correct action in the beginning is to understand where the problem comes from. Learning a foreign language is a very time-consuming and lengthy process, which requires a lot of time, efforts and money. However, each of these "problems" are solved if you follow simple rules and the correct system approach to learn a foreign language. You also need to have clear concepts why you need it to motivate yourself during learning.

There are a number of others, that are much more important. They are connected with the person`s career and his professional development. If you are interested in a career, a good salary and a decent life, it`s impossible to achieve without knowledge of foreign language. For example, English is the language of the world`s business, and in 80% of all computer data in the world English is also used. Now employers require knowledge of English or other language depending on the country they work with. In addition, among other things, knowing a foreign language is an indicator that you are able to work on yourself, you are able to overcome difficulties and to learn something new.

In the modern world it is difficult to find a profession in which a foreign language would not be necessary: training, reading literature on the topic you are interested in etc. According to statistics, over the previous 3-5 years the following specialties are leading in the market knowledge of English:

In the first place, of course, are software engineers. In the IT field, without knowledge of English there is nothing to do; managers of medium and large companies, engineers of various specializations, accountants, economists, financiers, marketing specialists, project managers, copywriters and rewriters-all these specialties require good skills of English.

So, if, after all, you have decided to start learning a foreign language, the next question will be: how to start? How to learn the language by your self? Yes, indeed, studying a foreign language with a tutor is one of the most effective forms of training (after directly being in environment with native speakers). But there are many methods and ways to effectively learn a foreign language at home, having only a computer and the Internet. You need to follow several rules to make your training effective.

Repetitions with intervals. Always after learning a new material, especially vocabulary, try to repeat the material passed at short intervals. If you want that all you have learned will postpone in your long-term memory for a long time, you need to "refresh" periodically what you have learned.

Also when studying grammar, vocabulary and other sections, include in your training other information space related to your subject of study. Films in the language you are studying with subtitles, podcasts, short videos on YouTube, reading books. Such a variety will help you quickly and easily learn the language, even at a subconscious level. Try to practice more. Download your favorite movies or serials with subtitles, listen to the speech of the characters, try to repeat, and most importantly - do not be afraid to make mistakes. If possible, communicate with friends who know at some level the language you are studying. Over time, you will realize that in this way your learning process has been made not only more interesting, but also more effective.

Of course, the basis for all of the previous methods will serve a classical training with books or thematic sites. So learning a foreign language is not an easy thing. However, if you maximize your efforts to take possession of a foreign language, the results will not be long in coming.
